Town Meeting ReScheduled For Next Monday

Methuen Defeated

Randy Towne (93) makes a flying leap to stop a Methuen player in one of a number of defensive plays that held the Warriors' traditional rival to a score of 8 in Saturday's game. Andover High finished with a total of 14 points, adding another win to what is so far an unbeaten season. This Saturday Andover will meet North Andover for the annual Thanksgiving Day game at 10 a.m. at the Playsted. (Reed)

Special Session Fails To Attract Voter Quorum

EARLY ISSUE NEXT WEEK

The Andover TOWNSMAN will publish one day early next week in order to permit employees to spend Thanksgiving Day at home.

All news copy should be received no later than Monday, Nov. 20 for publication on Nov. 22. Those submitting church and social news should make an effort to have it in by Saturday, Nov. 18.

Voters have been called for a second time to a special Town Meeting to approve 16 articles, including two for funds relating to school construction projects and another to clear the way for water and sewer lines that must be provided for Gillette Co. in Lowell Junction.

Just 312 of the 350 voters necessary for a quorum registered at the Meeting convened Monday at Andover Junior High School. After a 45 minute wait, officials announced that the meeting would be adjourned until 8 p.m. next Monday, Nov. 20.

Among key items to be considered is a $100,000 appropriation for plans and bid specs for renovation of the junior high school building, $10,000 to be added to available land acquisition funds for purchase of land for an addition to West School and $180,000 for completion of the Roger's Brook project.

One of the major articles involves no appropriation.

The town must receive voter approval for acquisitions of rights-of way in Lowell Junction before it can proceed with the installation of utilities promised Gillette Co. at the last Town Meeting.

The change in weather now makes still another matter one of prime importance: the appropriation of $20,000 for the snow removal budget which was depeleted last spring when late snows ate into the allocation for that municipal service.

Another article of significance, a $28,000 appropriation for a 12" water main from Bancroft Rd. through to Holt Rd.

AVIS Elects Claus Denger Its President

Claus O. Dengler was elected president of the Andover Village Improvement Society by trustees at Tuesday's annual meeting, held in the auditorium at Central School.

The board also named these additional officers: Harold Rafton, 1st vice president; Mrs. James C. Keck, 2nd vice president; Albert L. Retelle, 3rd vice president; Mrs. Joshua Miner, secretary; and David MacDonald, treasurer.

The membership elected the following board members for three year terms: Mrs. Ruth Hayes, Mrs. Joshua Miner, Robert L. V. Miner, Robert M. Perrault and Nathaniel B. Smith.

An Open Letter . . .

from Philip K. Allen
Chairman, Andover Board of Selectmen

"I speak with sadness of the loss of Andover's finest attribute – civic responsibility. For, judging by the number of citizens who turned up at the Special Town Meeting Monday night, the evidence was unmistakable. Contrast this with the 300-mile trip which Joe Monan, chairman of the Conservation Commission, made in the middle of his long-deferred hunting vacation in Maine in order to attend the meeting and carry out his responsibilities!

"What must be done? Should the Selectmen always insert an article which will arouse enough people to come – a leash law for dogs, for example? Should steps be taken to adopt a Representative Town Meeting law?

"Not all of the articles in this Warrant are of an emergency nature, it is true. But there are enough of them to require immediate action by the voters – and this is the only way a town can function, through the final authority of a Town Meeting. We have, for examples, the obligation to begin immediately on the acquiring of land for water and sewer lines to the Lowell Junction area for the Gillette Company. The second phase of the Rogers Brook extension must be financed. We must start on plans for the renovation of the Junior High School and the addition to the West Elementary School as agreed by the Finance Committee, the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen.

"I hope that next Monday, Nov. 20, will see that civic responsibility is not dead and that the people of Andover will stand up and be counted."

Schools To Take Over Elementary Libraries

The school department will take over administration of elementary school libraries on July 1, 1968, from Memorial Hall Library which has administered them for 15 years.

Dr. Daniel Frishman, chairman of the board of trustees of the town library, met no opposition when he proposed the transfer at Tuesday night's School Committee meeting, and recommended that the School Committee create a new post of coordinator to administrate the school libraries and to coordinate the library function with school curriculums.

Frishman's case - that only by becoming part of the school system could these libraries hope to give the full-time service that is needed - was so convincing that the committee unanimously passed Committeeman William Doherty's motion that the 1968 School budget include funds so that the transfer could be made on July 1 instead of in September, the earliest date that Frishman and A. James Anderson, Memorial Hall director, had hoped for. Junior and senior high libraries are already completely administered by the school department.

JH Renovation Is Debated

Some disagreement arose between members of the School Committee Tuesday when that board met with architects for renovation of the present junior high school building to continue discussion of whether the town should undertake to "repair" the building for an estimated $1.1 million or to "remodel" it for an estimated $1.8 million.

The issue has yet to be resolved officially, though School Chairman Louis Galbiati considers that the board tacitly agreed to plans for extensive renovation when it made the basic decision a week ago to improve the present building rather than undertake construction of a new junior high at this time.

The board, however, has yet to take a vote to approve or disapprove preliminary plans drafted by architects Ruffing & Walwood and the chairman said Wednesday that he may call his board to take such a vote before Town Meeting on Monday. Taxpayers will be asked then to appropriate funds for working drawings and bid specs for the remodeling and/or renovation project.

Committeewoman Virginia Cole questioned the architects Tuesday about the wisdom of doing more to the building than making basic repairs to the roof, floors, ventilating system, wiring and plumbing. She contended that it would be better to spend less money and make the school "safe" and adequate for a period of five to 10 years than to invest the larger sum in a building which she contends cannot be made flexible enough to serve the system well for the 30-year-life-span architects say the building is capable of.

Dr. Galbiati, Frederick Fitzgerald and Dr. Richard Katz all took the position that it would be "expensive temporizing" to do less than a first class job, or to renovate with only five to 10 years in mind. Dr. Katz reminded Mrs. Cole that she was one of the first to support proposals for remodeling the junior high and Dr. Galbiati pointed out that though he had originally favored construction of a new building, he had decided after hearing the architects' diagnosis that remodeling offered the town its best chance of having the equivalent of a new junior high school by September of 1969. He said that if voters do not want to renovate the building, they are faced with the necessity of tearing it down.

Committeeman William A. Doherty re-expressed his view that a new junior high school should be constructed.

There was further committee controversy when a discussion of junior high school departmentalization arose and Mrs. Cole was once again in opposition to the majority. She told the board that she feels grouping seventh, eighth ninth grades in the renovated building in the manner now planned represents a pulling away from attitudes on departmentalization expressed in plans for the new senior high school. Principals William Hart and Dorothy Partridge told the board they do not feel it is so important to group departments together as it is to group junior high students by grades, facilitating grade-level team teaching.

Classicist Authors Book

"Sixty Poems of Martial", a new book by Phillips Academy English instructor, poet, and classicist, Dudley Fitts, was published last month by Harcourt, Brace & World.

The poems are verse translations from Latin into English 60 epigrams by the satirist poet, Valerius Martial, first century AD.

Fitts who teaches at PA on the Independence Foundation Teaching Endowment, has also translated the works of many other Latin and Greek authors and recently collaborated with Carlos Baker and other American Scholars on "Modern American Usage - A Guide" which was published last year.

His newest book was 15 years in preparation.

Mrs. Beverly Nina Avery, then 48, set the record for the most marriages and divorces in October 1957 by obtaining her sixteenth divorce from Gabriel Avery, her fourteenth husband. She said five of the fourteen had broken her nose.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

cited the immediate need for a fulltime qualified librarian for the new Bancroft School and the need for improved library service for all elementary schools in areas of facilities, number of books, and personnel. He expressed the view that full-time qualified librarians are needed in each school. Dr. Frishman said the eligibility status of present library personnel for schools employment would have to be worked out individually, but the chairman said he foresees no real problems since most of the staff is at least partially qualified for school certification. He recommended a committee be formed to work out the transitions of the libraries to the school department.

Both Anderson and Dr. Frishman offered the help of the library in recruiting candidates for the school library coordinator's post and the Bancroft librarianship.

Christ Church Offers New Fair Features

"A surprise boutique, modestly-priced paintings by talented local artists plus inexpensive, handcrafted articles children can buy as Christmas gifts and adults can use as stocking-stuffers will be new features at the Christ Church Fair," promises Mrs. Lyman Pope, fair chairman.

Also new at the annual event, to be held at the church on Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., will be selected films for young children and a booth where busy shoppers can purchase a take-home supper of home-cooked baked beans and ham plus coleslaw.

Co-chairman Mrs. Clarence Pope has announced that Christmas greens and decorations artistically fashioned by a group headed by Mrs. Harry Chase and Mrs. Lees Brown will be ready for the sale.

Mrs. Chester Kopatch and Mrs. Walter Caswell are chairmen of the churchwomen who for many weeks have been busily sewing distinctive aprons for the Fair. Stuffed toys, slippers, soft dolls and felt gonks are among the items especially handmade for children by a committee under the direction of Mrs. Hazen Curtis 3rd and Mrs. David Lockwood.

A variety of handcrafted and original articles and accessories will be shown shoppers at a gift section for which Mrs. Theodore Reed and Mrs. Edward Stupack are responsible. Also available will be items of clothing handknitted by women under the chairmanship of Mrs. Robert Goodwin and Mrs. Carleton Kimball.

A collection of books for good reading will be offered at Fair tables supervised by Mrs. Louis Hoitsma and Mrs. Alexander Warren. Numerous "attic treasures" have been gathered for sale by Mrs. James Wilson and her committee.

Mrs. Edward Sabbagh and Mrs. William Walsh will show jewelry selected for Christmas giving. Mrs. Benjamin Baldwin heads the group preparing a "surprise boutique", and an outstanding collection of original paintings by Andover artists has been compiled by Mrs. Philip Allen who reports that they will sell for modest prices.

Hardy plants for the home will be offered in another Fair section under the direction of Mrs. Robert Gable and Mrs. T. R.D. Collins. Mrs. Adair Miller and Mrs. William Warntz, will sell used sporting equipment and the "take-home" supper and children's films will be arranged by Mrs. Harry Loebel and wives of the church's vestrymen.

Homemade bakery products will be sold at a table for which Mrs. Richard Secord and Mrs. Norman Hill Jr. are chairmen. Luncheon will be served from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. by a committee headed by Miss Isabelle Greenhow. Hostess and supervisor of the luncheon room will be Mrs. Frederick Cummings.

Banners, decorations and posters urging the public to attend Christ Church Fair have been prepared by a group which includes Mrs. Philip Chenevert, Mrs. Rennie McQuilkin, Miss Linda Kopatch, Everett Aubry, Calvin Hatch Jr., Edward Ratyna and Arnold Cole. Mrs. Lyman Bullard is telephone chairman and James Polofan will be the Fair treasurer.

Drug Talk Draws 300

A combined meeting of all the Protestant Youth Fellowships held at the Free Christian Church Sunday evening attracted nearly 300 participants. The program centered its attention on "Drugs: Their Use and Effect" and featured Jack Sarmanian and "John", a former drug addict.

After a brief introduction on the Drug Unit itself, Sarmanian spoke of the different kinds of drugs. His presentation stressed the fact that drugs are too dangerous to be played with and should be used only under medical supervision. "John" told the young people honestly about his own life, his prison record, and his attempts to "kick" the habit. Following the formal presentations the speakers answered questions from the audience for almost an hour. The questions ranged from "What does it feel like to be on a high?" to "What percentage of the patients at the Drug Unit do you cure?"

The program was sponsored by the youth committee of the Andover Council of Churches. Each participating church has elected youth representatives to serve on the committee with adult advisers. Rev. David E. Allen and Rev. Thomas Dipko are co-chairmen.

Did you ever stop to think of the hundreds of different temperatures and textures your hands encounter during a year? Former Aide To Kennedy Heads Drive

Richard K. Donahue of Lowell has been named to head the 1968 March of Dimes for the Merrimack Valley chapter. His appointment as campaign director for the 47 communities in the northern Essex and Middlesex counties was announced by William C. Collins, chapter chairman.

"The January drive marks 30 years of Medical Progress in Massachusetts through the March of Dimes," stated Atty. Donahue in accepting the appointment. "Pity didn't stop polio, the March of Dimes did," he said, "and now the organization enters its 10th year in its fight to find the causes and prevention of birth defects."

Donahue has been a partner in the law firm of Donahue & Donahue since 1951.

From 1960 to November, 1963, he served as an assistant to President John F. Kennedy.

Prior to 1960, he was active in many of President Kennedy's earlier campaigns for the United States Senate and in 1960 traveled through the primary states of New Hampshire, Wisconsin, West Virginia and Oregon. After the Democratic Convention he served as deputy national director for the Kennedy campaign. Since 1963, Donahue has served as an expert consultant to various government agencies including the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Post Office Department.

Born in Lowell, he was educated at Keith Academy, Dartmouth College, Boston University School of Law. He is admitted to practice in Massachusetts, the District of Columbia, the Federal Courts and the United States Supreme Court, and currently serves on the Board of Delegates of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

"The 30th Anniversary of the National Foundation-March of Dimes will coincide with the opening of the 100th Birth Defect Center in the nation supported by contributions from the public," according to the new chairman. "Children with serious birth defects frequently require the skills of a number of different medical specialists working together and can be costly to the community," he continued. Every year more than 250,000 children are born less then perfect in mind and body.

Through a team approach the March of Dimes is trying to help as many of these children as possible become productive members of society, and through research and education trying to find the causes of defects in children and prevent them.

"To help us do a successful job we, therefore, urge the public to give generously to expand current research programs to make this possible," he added.

GIFT HEADQUARTERS FOR S. S. PIERCE

"You'll Find Our Selection As New As Tomorrow — In A Wonderful World Of Color . . ."

We're not married to any one carpet fiber

We're too careful for that. And so should you be.

You've heard the best carpet fiber is wool? Acrylic? Nylon? Polypropylene? They're all good. But some are better at one thing, some another.

So Lees, our feature carpet brand, plays the field.

You might say they do the fiber shopping for you. From the head-swimming number of fibers available today, they pick the best. (Lees has a whole division just for that.)

If Lees puts a fiber into living room carpet designed for a big family, it's the right fiber. (When they say the fiber in a carpet will stand up to foyer traffic, it will.) The fiber they use in the kitchen won't be the same one they put in a formal dining room. It'll just be the fiber for the job. Every time.

Of course fiber alone is no guarantee of anything. If the pile is skimpy, if the back is weak, if the dye job is iffy, a carpet will be a failure no matter what it's made of.

That's why Lees is so careful. To get the best out of their fibers, they handle each one as if it's the only fiber in the world.

So if you want names to remember when you're carpet shopping—something to make you feel secure —don't make it fiber names. Make it Lees You'll come out better.

Editorial Comment

It IS Important

If you stayed away from Town Meeting Monday night, you were among the majority, exercising your right under a free system to neglect the business of democracy.

Because of you, 312 willing voters wasted a fair chunk of an evening; the town wasted some $600; and all the boards and municipal employees that must function to ready a warrant for public consideration wasted countless hours of energy.

Town Meetings in Andover never attract anything like a majority of the more than 10,000 voters of this community. The minority always rules, but at least enough of the minority usually shows up to permit the transaction of business.

Why then did Monday night's meeting fail? Probably because there was nothing about the warrant to stir the passions of the kind of voters who react only when they are avidly for or angrily opposed to something. There wasn't a cause big enough to rally large blocks of voters with vested interests; if there had been, lodge meetings, club socials, the weather – all these excuses would have been put aside by enough voters to make up a quorum.

A good many people attend the annual Town Meeting who never take any active interest in municipal affairs the rest of the year. There is an opportunity for socializing, entertainment and sometimes even a good fight. More than one voter has been heard to comment: "I wouldn't have missed it. It's better than TV!"

But the town's business is sometimes just routine; vital, but not vital enough to inspire a battle cry. That is the kind of business that hangs fire now because too few people considered the matters at hand important enough to warrant their attention. Well they are important. It is important that funds be provided to lay plans for modernization and renovation of the junior high school; it is important to obtain rights of way for the laying of water and sewer lines into the Lowell Junction area where Gillette Co. plans construction; it is important to acquire land to enlarge the West School site to make room for a large addition to that building; it is important to have enough money for snow removal for the coming winter . . . etc. etc. etc.

It is important that all the voters who stayed away this week turn out next Monday, November 20 at 8 p.m. to transact business that cannot wait.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:

The criticism in last week's Townsman (Nov. 2) of current dissent against the Vietnam War shows how dangerous automatic patriotism can be.

American involvement in Vietnam bears little resemblance to our far more justifiable participation in World Wars I and II. Today, despite all official propaganda to the contrary, our Government is itself the foreign aggressor in the Vietnamese civil war. Precious American lives and wealth are being squandered in an undeclared war as illegal and unjust as Japan's rape of China in the '30's and '40's. The vast majority of Vietnamese are fighting against the Americans for their national survival and independence, and they are resisting just as stubbornly and heroically as did the English against the German blitzkrieg in World War II.

Automatic patriotism corrupted and finally destroyed Japan and Germany. It does not belong in our great democracy, which it is already corrupting and may eventually destroy. Our leaders in Power, in their arrogant and dishonorable military crusade to dictate the political and economic destiny of Vietnam, are sponsoring such crimes against the Vietnamese people and countryside, that those Christian and other leaders in Andover who really know the facts about this war and are not actively urging dissent are clearly betraying their moral, religious, and patriotic responsibility.

The Last Days Of EXPO '67

By Bartlett H. Hayes Jr.
Ch, Art Department, Phillips Academy

PART II

For me, EXPO '67 carried four messages as a forecast of the future; one, the reality of environment as realized in the many illusionary images of multiple film to be experienced in a number of pavilions; another, the conscious manipulation of scale in relation to the human figure - again a sense of environment; a third, the astounding lines waiting to see the art exhibition which was an astounding accomplishment in itself; and finally, the expression of those sensitive developments in living plans for the future - Habitat. Let me comment more fully, yet briefly on each. In the most successful of the "environmental movies," there was both logic and theme. The medium may have been the "message" in the sense that it established the observer as being a participant, rather than a mere observer, but the theme was the environment too. For example, a section of the Austrian pavilion was devoted to explaining to its visitors something of the character and history of that country. After the wait in line, visitors were led into a steel vaulted room the slanting walls of which met overhead in the shape of a gothic dome. A dozen colorful banners hung from the ceiling and one wondered where else to look. Suddenly, by push-button, the banners were furled and, as instantaneously, the audience seated on revolving chairs in the center was surrounded by the moving panorama of the Austrian mountains. The 100 odd chairs rotating randomly now this way, now that, were as animated as the projected environment. One thousand years of history was relived in twenty minutes. The world of Austria was astir.

In one pavilion after another, the message of reality was purveyed through the sense of vision by various techniques. The curved screen presentation of the Canadian Pacific building dramatized the wildness and sensibleness of youth. Motorcycles flashed across each other with the dramatic illusion provided by modern technology yet reminiscent of the keystone comedies which delighted audiences during the early years of this century. A jalopy manned by two youngsters raced two cowboys on horseback across the trackless prairie, coming to an unbelievable stop at the brink of a vast hidden canyon which opened up abruptly far below, so that the audience gripped its seats and gasped, so powerful was the illusion of the experience. Perhaps the most consumate of any presentations were two rooms of the Czeckoslovakian building. In one, the industrial and agrarian story of modern life was told by projections on and through moving opaque and translucent cubes, cylinders and spools, which took the stage like actors symbolizing the clockwork movement by which modern society can be regulated. In the other, was a rectangular wall made up of 112 two foot blocks on which a variety of coordinated images represented nature, things made from nature and man himself. The overall theme of EXPO was explicitly stated as the blocks shot forward in three-dimensional relief, now here, now there, coordinated by computer with the beat of the music. The music changed mood as the visual mood changed. The cubic repetitiousness of the symbols not only reflected the monotony of modern routine, but also gave validity to the repetitious squares of the American painter, Andy Warhol, whose insistence on the repeated image has caused such professional aesthetic controversy.

But if EXPO made any broad aesthetic statement, it was the acceptance of strange abstract forms on the part of people who have refused to accept such idioms heretofore. The monumental abstract sculpture by a variety of artists took its place among the sculptural character of the pavilions as appropriately as the old fashioned barn was related to the house. A mammoth, sedate sculpture by Alexander Calder (one of the few modern artists the public has been able to "take") was virtually lost amid the architectural turbulence of the many pavilions around it. To lose a mammoth is not easy; if EXPO possessed any overall weakness it was the lack of relatedness both inside and out of the multitude of elements contending for attention. The impressive exception was, again, the Czechoslavakian building wherein, historical treasures, painting, sculpture, wood, fabric, glass were literally glowingly integrated with the projected world already described. Alas, for chauvinistic pride perhaps, the U. S. sphere was disappointing for this same lack of unity in terms of the vast, overwhelming interior. To be sure, the oversize paintings, the ramps and the scientific displays provided shapes by which to measure the space inside without which the space might have seemed no larger than a bubble in a bathtub, but the Hollywood treatment as well as the treatment of Hollywood in a tedious unconvincing display detracted from the whole.

In extenuation of any weaknesses let me merely point out that the time within which EXPO was organized and produced makes its appearance phenomenal. It is far more profitable, as a cultural historian of today and tomorrow, for me to look at more positive aspects, the lessons which EXPO has taught me. I have dealt with two, all too arbitrarily: first, the sense of environment as revealed through the visitor participation in the projected image; second, the environment as represented by architectural and sculptural interrelationships with reference to the human being, despite a lack of overall coordination. To have achieved the latter would have required many more years of careful planning. The third lesson is the interest of the average person in cultural, specifically artistic matters, when the contents of the exhibition and its presentation are good enough. The objective of those charged with assembling the 188 works of art, painting, sculpture, drawings, prints, from all periods of time and from every portion of the globe was to construct the "Gem" of EXPO '67. I have already referred to the U. S. sphere as the scintillating diamond, sparkling in its surroundings and have demurred as to its contents. Although the building which housed the art exhibition is pleasant and effective and will remain as a permanent shelter, it was the contents which became the gem, the many gems. Charged with the importance of assembling the best was Pierre Dupuy, Commissioner General for Canada; but the original conception was that of the late Donald Buchanan, a Trustee of the National Gallery of Canada, and its fulfillment that of Miss Kathleen Fenwick, Curator of Prints and Drawings of the National Gallery, who was appointed director of the exhibit itself. A long list of international honorary committees, executive committees, advisory committees and administrative committees is to be found in the handsome 400 page illustrated catalogue still available from the National Gallery, Ottawa.

The merging of multiple experiences at EXPO was my strongest feeling for it, again recalling the theme, "Man and His World." To analyze it all as summarily as I have done here, leaves me with the feeling that there is an enormous amount unsaid and that I have not provided an accurate account. This is the feeling which I believe everyone must have had for, no matter how long his stay, there was still more.

Will EXPO '67 influence the future? Of course!

STUART LITTLE Fan Shares Author's Letters

The children's room is featuring correspondence between E. B. White, author of STUART LITTLE, and a devoted Andover fan of his. Kay Berthold Frishman, when she was 10 years old read and loved STUART LITTLE "but", she said, "I don't like the ending because I don't know whether he's going to get there or not."

White answered, "Thanks for your letter, Sorry the end doesn't sound right to you . . . All I can tell you is that STUART LITTLE was driving a good car, liked to travel, and was headed in the right direction." In 1966 White wrote an article about Stuart for the New York Times which Kay read while in Uruguay as a Peace Corps Volunteer. The book's ending came clear thirteen years after her original letter. So there was a 1966 exchange of letters which are now on display along with the first set in the children's room at Memorial Hall Library. Children are still complaining about the ending of STUART LITTLE and love the book, seemingly forever.

Hard-Of-Seeing

Those who find it difficult to read, and would like to listen to fiction, poetry, current events, or anything that is printed for that matter should save Friday morning for an hour with the "Never Too Late to Listen" program at Memorial Hall Library. Mrs. Pauline Downes, formerly of the library staff reads what those who attend most want to hear. She wants suggestions. Her next program will be Friday, Nov. 17 in the main reading room at 10 a.m.

Gifts Welcome

Books by Polish authors or about Poland were presented to A. J. Anderson for Memorial Hall Library at a coffee party held by the Polish Milennium Committee of Greater Lawrence. The Committee prepared and the library used a large and handsome display during the Milennial year 1966 as a background for its Polish books. Since then federal funds have made possible the purchase of books in the Polish language. With the new gift from the committee the library has a well-rounded collection of books. Consult the catalog under the headings Poland or Polish literature. A librarian will be glad to help if you wish.

Story Hours

Miss Elizabeth Russell will be narrating the "Pumpkin Giant" from Wilhelmina Harper's HARVEST FEAST and "Thankful the Turkey" in Charlotte Conover's A HOLIDAY STORY SAMPLER on Thursday, Nov. 16 at 3:30 p.m.

Boys and girls of school age who would like to listen should meet in the children's room at 3:30.

On Nov. 30 Mrs. Margaret Berry will tell stories from far-away lands.

Great Books Tonight

The discussion group will have the Great Book selection Of Civil Government as their topic tonight at the library at 8 o'clock. Locke's points are highly pertinent today when the role of government and the goals we would like to set for government are of concern to many. Come and talk it over with your neighbors at the library. All great books meetings are open to the public. Memorial Hall Library is the setting for Great Books discussions in the Greater Lawrence area. You are welcome to start now.

Euripedes Is Topic

Vengeance and destruction characterize the Greek plays to be considered by the fifth-year group of Great Books members when they meet at Memorial Hall Library Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. They will have Euripedes MEDEA and his HIPPOLYTUS as springboards for their discussion of men, women, and the gods; exaltation and debasement; and vengeance by both humans and the gods. What kind of love destroys? And why does a woman's love bring sorrow?

A Holiday

Both the main library and the Ballardvale branch will be closed on November 23. Ballardvale will keep open hours on Friday the 24th instead.

Fly Exhibit

The Federation of Fly Fishermen provided the exhibit of hand-tied flies, old and rare fishing and fly-tying books, and Memorial Hall contributed books to be taken home from its circulating collection of interest to fishermen and fly-tyers. The result is a stunning display for fishermen and for anyone interested in the outdoors. The exhibit will continue from November 16 to 29, in the main reading room at the library.

THE DINING ROOM of the Leavitt House on South Main Street, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Adamsky. (Graber)

Historic House To Be Shown

Among the five homes that will be opened to the public for the Andover Garden Club's Christmas Garland House Tour on Nov. 25 is the restored antique residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Adamsky who now occupy the South Main Street house built in the early 1800's for one Jonathan Leavitt.

The house has a history which conjures up a picture of Andover in the days when a choice piece of residential land could be had for $150.

Robert Adamsky has researched this history and presents the following record of the Leavitt House.

"The house, built in 1823, represents the home of a successful, but not wealthy, businessman. Jonathan Leavitt was a bookbinder associated with the printing firm of Flagg & Gould, and according to records in the Registry of Deeds, acquired the land on which the house is located from Abraham Gould in the Spring of 1823. The price of approximately one acre of land was $150. Later in the year, a mortgage by J. Leavitt to Abraham Gould, Timothy Flagg, and Mark Newman for $2000 is recorded. Thus, the principles of the printing firm financed the building of the house, and it may be assumed that the $2000 represented the approximate cost of the structure. With the completion of the house, a "book row" was established on South Main Street. North of the Leavitt house, separated now by one more recent building, are the houses of Abraham Gould (now occupied by the Kaisers), Timothy Flagg (present home of the Millers) and Mark Newman Sr. (210 South Main St.). Newman was the bookseller of the "corporation". The triangle of land North of Highland Road was the site of the printing office of Flagg and Gould, however, the structure was later moved or demolished.

"Mr. Leavitt was not native to Andover, appearing on the scene about 1820. He was admitted to membership in the South Church in 1826, and moved to New York City in 1828, where he became a bookseller and publisher with the firm of Leavitt and Lord, later Leavitt, Lord and Newman. He sold the house to Mark Newman Jr. in 1828, although the deed of sale is recorded in 1832. Mark Jr. lived in the house until 1843, when he left his father's business to join Mr. Leavitt in New York. Later families living in the house were the Wheelers, Dows, Pearsons, Winslows, Barnards, Merricks, and Roberts, with the Dows from 1849 to 1896 representing the longest ownership.

"The house was built by David Hidden, a native of Newburyport, who came to Andover in 1807, and later built many of the fine homes and school buildings on and around "Academy Hill". The recently discovered journal of David Hidden, resurrected from long obscurity in the Andover Historical Society, shows that he was working on "Mr. Levit's" house in April, 1823, and throughout that summer. He constructed a woodshed in December, a fence in April, 1824, a well-cover in May, and in April, 1825 the roof balustrade. In December of that year he began work on the barn. The balustrade is no longer in its original position, having been moved halfway up the roof, probably after a storm had inflicted damage to the structure. Unfortunately, in the Hidden Journal, more details are given for the balustrade and the barn than for the house, and no material lists are recorded for the house itself.

"Mr. Hidden built the house in the basic Georgian four-square style, and although the time was late in the Federal era, and in the beginning of the Greek Revival period, constructional features are those of the early Federal period. The house contains a center hall, flanked on either side by rooms front and back on both floors. Two chimneys provide back to back fireplaces in all rooms. The original kitchen, now the sitting room, was probably supplemented by a summer kitchen in the "ell" which was built about 1830, and demolished about 1940. Whether Mr. Leavitt conducted his bookbinding in the barn, or in another building on the property or elsewhere is not known.

HISTORIC HOUSE

"Although much of the house is original, the construction and destruction of the ell necessitated major restoration in the present kitchen and back hall. Much of the material used in restoration was obtained from old houses in process of demolition. The back doorway, probably originating in Rhode Island, came from a house in Beverly Farms, woodwork from Newburyport, and floorboards from East Douglas, Mass., and Exeter, N. H. The fireplace in the kitchen had been closed, and reopening this required considerable upheaval in the modern heating system.

"Old features of interest in the house are the beehive oven and kitchen fireplace, many panes of old crown glass still remain, panelled "christian doors", wide board wainscotting, old locks and latches, and seven original fireplace mantles. The slight curvature of ceilings and floors, much more evident upstairs, is a constructional feature typical of seacoast carpenters."

Flower Show Is Next Month

The Spade & Trowel Garden Club will sponsor a "Home for the Holidays" standard flower show on Dec. 8 and 9 to raise funds for completion of a garden at the elderly housing project and for the beginning of a landscape project at Chestnut Court.

On Dec. 8, the show will be held between the hours of 1 and 6 p.m. and on Dec. 9, between 10:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served in the afternoon.

Pike School Will Expand Facilities

Trustees of Pike School have begun a program to raise $225,000 for the purpose of adding space for four new classrooms and a gymnasium as well as a supply of cash capital for completion of long-range objectives drawn in 1960.

Vincent P. Morton Jr., chairman of the trustees, described plans to a group of some 300 parents at the school last week, reporting that the expansion will make room for about 40 additional boys and girls.

Speaking to explain the educational advantages involved was William H. Harding, headmaster. He said that new classrooms will incorporate space specifically designed for science classes and will complete the original architectural concept by permitting the scheduling of art, music and science in areas especially designed for them. The subsequent release of conventional classroom space will permit the addition of two sections of boys and girls in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, he said. Pierce & Pierce, architects for the original school complex, will design the addition.

John A. Harrison is directing the fund raising effort and some 400 families are expected to participate.
